Hi Gina,

This announcement went out through our Tribal Environmental Contacts in Alaska listserve, via Brock. This is our best method of getting the word out, unless you were hoping to reach out in another way?

In your email on Friday you indicated that you were also hoping to get participation from EPA, was there anyone in particular that you were hoping to include? I am assuming you want technical experts but I thought I would check in with you.

Thanks! Tami

FYI, This message has been forwarded to all of the AK IGAP Environmental Coordinators, please contact the listed contact in the email for more information about the topic.

This email may contain information from multiple sources including tribes, State and Federal Agencies, and other sources. Any information or opinions in this email does not necessarily represent the views of the United States or the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) will host a public workshop on human health criteria in state water quality standards (18 AAC 70). The workshop will take place on October 29-30th in Anchorage at the Alaska Center for the Performing Arts. The goals of the workshop are to inform Alaska Pollutant Discharge Elimination System permit holders and applicants and the interested public on the role of human health criteria in water quality standards, how human health criteria are derived, and how revisions to the criteria may be implemented in Alaska's regulatory programs.

The workshop will be technical in nature. Interested parties should have a basic understanding of the federal Clean Water Act and the role of water quality standards in environmental regulation.

This workshop is informational only and no regulations are being proposed at this time.
